CIVIL ACTION

Case No. 3:22-CV-00191-MOC-DCK

EXPERT REBUTTAL REPORT OF ARMAND H. MATHENY AN TOMM MARIA, MD, PhD, FAAP, HEC-C

I, Armand H. Matheny Antommarmia, hereby declare and state as follows:

1. I have been retained by counsel for Plaintiff as a rebuttal expert in connection with the above-captioned litigation.

2. I have actual knowledge of the matters stated herein.

3. In preparing this declaration, I reviewed the expert reports by Randi C. Ettner, PhD, and Fan Li, PhD. Dr. Ettner's report contains copies of the Division Transgender Accommodations Review Committee's Position Statement: Gender Reassignment Surgery and Case Summary: Offender #0618705, which I also reviewed. In addition to these expert reports and the materials cited herein, I have also relied on my years of research and other experience, as set out in my curriculum vitae (Exhibit A), in forming my opinions. The materials I have relied upon in preparing this expert rebuttal report are the same types of materials that experts in my fields of study regularly rely upon when forming opinions on subjects. I may wish to supplement these opinions or the bases for them due to new scientific research or publications, or in response to statements and issues that may arise in my area of expertise.

OVERVIEW

4. I am a pediatrician and bioethicist with extensive clinical and research experience. I am the author of 42 peer-reviewed articles, which have been published in high-impact journals including the Journal of the American Medical Association and Annals of Internal Medicine, and I direct the Ethics Center at Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center. This expert rebuttal report sets forth my reasons for my disagreement with and my concerns about the conclusions Dr. Li reaches in her expert report.

5. Dr. Ettner explains that gender-affirming genital surgery is a medically necessary treatment for Mrs. Zayre-Brown (Paragraphs 132-137). Dr. Li claims that evidence cited by Dr. Ettner and by the World Professional Association for Transgender Health (WPATH) does not provide reasonable support for Dr. Ettner's and WPATH's conclusions (Page 4).

6. Dr. Li mischaracterizes the level of evidence necessary for making treatment recommendations. Treatment recommendations are not required to be based on randomized controlled trials. Widely accepted methods for developing clinical practice guidelines state that treatment recommendations may be based on "low" or "very low" quality evidence.¹ In fact, a significant portion of treatment recommendations across the spectrum of medical interventions rely on this level of evidence. Dr. Li also fails to acknowledge the constraints on conducting randomized controlled trials for many medical treatments, including gender-affirming genital surgery and other forms of gender-affirming medical care.

BACKGROUND AND QUALIFICATIONS

7. I am the Director of the Ethics Center, the Lee Ault Carter Chair of Pediatric Ethics, and an Attending Physician in the Division of Hospital Medicine at Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center ("Cincinnati Children's"). I am also a Professor in the Departments of Pediatrics and Surgery at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine.

8. I received my medical degree from Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, Missouri in 2000. I received my PhD in Religious Ethics from The University of Chicago Divinity School in 2000. I completed my pediatrics residency at the University of Utah in 2003.

9. I have been licensed to practice medicine since 2001 and am currently licensed to practice medicine in Ohio. I have been Board Certified in General Pediatrics since 2004 and in Pediatric Hospital Medicine since the inception of this certification in 2019. I have been certified as a Healthcare Ethics Consultant since the inception of this certification in 2019.

¹ As explained below, "low" and "very low" are relative terms used to describe two of the four levels of evidence. They should not be misinterpreted as meaning "poor or inadequate" evidence.

10. I have extensive experience as a pediatrician and as a bioethicist. I have been in clinical practice since 2003 and 30% of my current effort is dedicated to caring for hospitalized patients. I provide evidence-based medical care to my patients and teach evidence-based medicine to the trainees that I supervise. This includes using clinical practice guidelines and teaching trainees how they are developed. I was Chair of the Ethics Committee at Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake City, Utah from 2005 to 2012 and have been Director of the Ethics Center at Cincinnati Children's since 2012. I regularly consult on the care of patients in the Transgender Health Clinic at Cincinnati Children's and participate in the Clinic's monthly multidisciplinary team meetings. I remain current with the medical and bioethics literature regarding the treatment of individuals with gender dysphoria. I chair Cincinnati Children's Fetal Care Center's Oversight Committee, which provides the Center recommendations on the use of innovative treatments and experimental interventions.

11. I am a member of the American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP), the American Society for Bioethics and Humanities (ASBH), the Association of Bioethics Program Directors, and the Society for Pediatric Research. I was a member of the AAP Committee on Bioethics from 2005 to 2011. I have also served as a member of the ASBH's Clinical Ethics Consultation Affairs Committee from 2009 to 2014 and currently serve on its Healthcare Ethics Consultant Certification Commission.

12. I am the author of 42 peer-reviewed journal articles, 11 non-peer-reviewed journal articles, 6 book chapters, and 28 commentaries. My peer-reviewed journal articles have been published in high-impact journals, including the Journal of the American Medical Association and Annals of Internal Medicine. I am also an author of 17 policy statements and technical reports, including 4 as lead author, by the AAP.

13. I am a member of the Executive Editorial Board and the Associate Editor for Ethics Rounds of Pediatrics. I am an active peer reviewer for many medical journals, including the American Journal of Bioethics and the Journal of Pediatrics. I also review abstracts for meetings of professional organizations, including the Pediatric Academic Societies and ASBH. I was previously a member of the editorial boards of the Journal of Clinical Ethics and the Journal of Medical Humanities.

14. In summary, as an academic pediatric hospitalist, I practice and teach evidence-based medicine, including the use and development of clinical practice guidelines. As a bioethicist, I help patients, parents, and health care providers address ethical dilemmas and resolve ethical conflicts. This involves analyzing the evidence and reasons supporting different treatment options.

15. I have previously testified at deposition and trial in Brandt v. Rutledge, United States District Court, Eastern District of Arkansas, Case No. 5:21-CV-00450-JM-1; and at deposition and trial in Dekker v. Weida, United States District Court, Northern District of Florida, Case No. 4:22-cv-00325-RH-MAF. I have also previously testified in the preliminary injunction phase in Doe v. Abbott, District Court of Travis County, Texas 353rd Judicial District, Case No. D-1-GN-22-000977; and in the preliminary injunction phase and at deposition in Boe v. Marshall, United States District Court, Northern District of Alabama, No. 22-cv-184.

16. I am being compensated at a rate of $400 per hour for my work in this matter. My compensation does not depend on the outcome of this litigation, the opinions I express, or the testimony I provide.

DR. LI'S EXPERT REPORT

17. Dr. Li contends that the evidence cited by Dr. Ettner and WPATH does not provide reasonable support for Dr. Ettner's and WPATH's conclusions regarding the effectiveness of gender-affirming medical care to treat gender dysphoria. What Dr. Li considers reasonable is clarified by her statement that "Among the dozens of studies reviewed, there is not a single randomized controlled trial. Most of the studies cited in support of those assertions are of low quality in terms of study design and statistical methodology (Dr. Fan Li Expert Report ("Li Report") at 4; see also id. at 25)." A substantial portion of Dr. Li's report provides her assessment of the research cited by Dr. Ettner and WPATH (Li Report at 11-24) and she frequently repeats her claims about reasonable support, randomized controlled trials, and "low" quality evidence (Li Report at 12, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 21, 22, and 24). Dr. Li's characterization of the studies being subject to confounding, selection, nonresponse, and recall bias is part of her justification for labeling them as "low" quality.

18. The primary problem with Dr. Li's opinions is not her characterization of individual studies. While not conceding Dr. Li's characterization of each individual study, there are few randomized controlled trials of gender-affirming medical care and the body of evidence is currently appropriately characterized as "low" or "very low" quality. The primary problem with Dr. Li's opinions is that the standard that she relies on for determining whether Dr. Ettner's and WPATH's conclusions are reasonable is inappropriately high. Recommendations in clinical practice guidelines are not based solely on the quality of the evidence, or on "high" quality evidence. Recommendations may appropriately be justified by observational studies. While observational studies are characterized as "low" quality evidence, "low" is a relative term describing the different levels of evidence and should not be misinterpreted as meaning "poor or inadequate." While a statistician may hold randomized controlled trials up as the "gold standard" of for evidence (Li Report at 8), clinicians must make decisions based on the best, currently available evidence, which includes other types of studies. They cannot tell their patients to come back later after randomized controlled trials have been conducted. Furthermore, there are sound reasons why randomized controlled trials may not be available or, if available, may not provide "high" quality evidence in particular circumstances. In practice, only a minority of clinical practice guideline recommendations are based on "high" quality evidence. The lack of randomized controlled trials and reliance on "low" quality evidence does not mean that there is not reasonable support for a clinical practice guideline recommendation or that a treatment is not medically necessary.

CLINICAL PRACTICE GUIDELINES

19. Given the breadth of the existing medical literature and its ever-increasing size, medical professionals may have difficulty finding useful information to inform decision-making and treatment recommendations. The optimal resource, if one is available, is a clinical practice guideline.²

20. Medical professional organizations develop clinical practice guidelines to provide clinicians with helpful, evidence-based recommendations and improve patient care and outcomes. Clinical practice guidelines are developed using systematic reviews of the literature—systematic processes to select and review relevant scientific evidence. Systematic reviews evaluate the evidence, but do not make treatment recommendations.³ Clinical practice guidelines both evaluate the evidence and make recommendations.⁴ One widely used method for rating the quality of evidence and the strength of recommendations is the Grades of Recommendation Assessment, Development and Evaluation (GRADE) system.⁵

Quality of the Evidence

21. In clinical practice guidelines, the quality of evidence has been defined as “the extent of our confidence that the estimates of an effect are adequate to support a particular decision or recommendation.”⁶ Quality of evidence is based on five factors: risk of bias, inconsistency, indirectness, imprecision, and publication bias. Dr. Li focuses on the risk of bias, including confounding, selection, nonresponse, and recall bias, as well as the inconsistency of results. The GRADE system distinguishes four levels of evidence: “high,” “moderate,” “low,” and “very low.” These levels are relative to one another and “low” does not necessarily mean “poor or inadequate.” As discussed below, a recommendation in a clinical practice guideline may be based on “low,” or “very low” quality evidence, not just “high” or “moderate” quality evidence.⁷

22. With respect to study design, randomized trials are initially assigned to the “high” category.⁸ In a randomized trial, participants are randomly assigned to a treatment or a comparison group. As Dr. Li describes (Li Report at 8), the major benefit of a randomized trial is that it decreases the likelihood that any differences in the outcomes between the groups is the result of baseline differences between the groups rather than the result of the intervention.⁹ In addition to randomization, randomized controlled trials also frequently use “blinding” or “masking.” In a “double-masked” trial, neither the investigators nor the participants know whether the participant was randomized to the treatment or comparison group. Masking reduces the effect of individuals’ biases on the ascertainment of the outcomes. For example, if investigators were biased in favor of the treatment and knew which participants were randomized to the treatment group, they might unconsciously report more favorable outcomes for them.¹⁰ While randomized controlled trials are initially assigned to the “high” category, their final rating may be lowered based on the aforementioned factors.¹¹

23. By comparison, observational studies are initially assigned to the “low” category.¹² Observational studies include cross-sectional and longitudinal studies. In cross-sectional studies, investigators collect data at a single point in time. Cross-sectional design permits investigators to examine potential associations between factors, but it cannot prove one factor caused the other. In longitudinal studies, researchers follow individuals over time, making continuous or repeated measures.¹³ Observational studies’ final rating may be increased if any of several factors, e.g., a large effect size, is present.¹⁴

24. The labels “high” and “low” quality evidence can be misleading if interpreted in the colloquial sense of “excellent or necessary” or “poor or inadequate,” respectively. While randomized controlled trials are described in the medical literature as “high” quality evidence and observational studies as “low” quality evidence, as described below, “low” quality evidence can be sufficient to justify treatment recommendations. Indeed, clinical practice guidelines regularly rely on “low” quality evidence. A trial or study having methodological limitations does not mean that it is irrelevant.

25. In some contexts, randomized controlled trials may be unavailable, may not be ethical or feasible, or may have intrinsic methodological limitations. There are significant barriers to randomized controlled trials, including their high cost and the lack of funding, the complexity of regulations and trial procedures, and difficulties recruiting sufficient participants.¹⁵ Randomized controlled trials, therefore, are less common than observational studies and may be unavailable for some treatments. Systematic reviews typically find “low” or “very low”-quality evidence for most medical interventions. Padhraig S. Fleming and colleagues conducted a review of systematic reviews published on the Cochrane Database of Systematic Reviews between January 1, 2013, and June 30, 2014. They focused on those that incorporated the GRADE approach and examined the quality of evidence for the first listed primary outcome. Of the 608 reviews, 82 (13.5%) reported “high,” 197 (30.8%) “moderate,” 193 (31.7%) “low,” and 126 (24%) “very low”- quality evidence.¹⁶ In a subsequent study, a related group of authors found that updated reviews did not consistently demonstrate an improvement in the quality of the evidence.¹⁷

26. At times, it may be unethical to conduct randomized trials. For randomized trials to be ethical, there must be clinical equipoise. Clinical equipoise is uncertainty within the scientific community about whether the intervention or the control is more efficacious. If clinical equipoise does not exist, it is unethical to knowingly expose trial participants to an inferior intervention or control. Trials must also be feasible: it would also be unethical to expose individuals to the risks of trial participation without the benefit of the trial generating generalizable knowledge. A randomized trial that is unlikely to find enough people to participate because they believe they might be randomized to an inferior intervention, for example, would be unethical because it could not produce generalizable knowledge due to an inadequate sample size.¹⁸

27. Even if randomized controlled trials can be conducted ethically, they may not provide “high” quality of evidence due to intrinsic design limitations. For example, if participants enrolled but were dissatisfied with the group to which they were randomized, they might seek treatment outside of the trial or not follow up. This crossover or loss to follow-up could negatively affect the trial. Surgical trials face additional issues: it may be difficult to control for the learning curve (changes in outcomes as a surgeon gains experience with a technique), different surgeon's skill levels, and differences or changes in the surgical technique.¹⁹

28. Observational studies are especially important when randomized controlled trials are unavailable, are not ethical or feasible, or have intrinsic methodological limitations.²⁰

Strength of Recommendations

29. When making recommendations, the authors of guidelines consider a variety of factors; the quality of the evidence is only one factor considered in making recommendations. Other considerations include the balance between desirable and undesirable outcomes, confidence and variability in patients' values and preferences, and resource use.²¹ The GRADE system distinguishes "strong" and "weak" recommendations; "guideline authors make a strong recommendation when they believe that all or almost all informed people would make the recommended choice" and a "weak" recommendation when most would but an appreciable number would not. GRADE acknowledges that "weak" recommendations can be confused with weak evidence or misinterpreted as ignorable or uncertain recommendations. It offers “conditional,” “discretionary” and “qualified” as alternatives to “weak.”²² The larger the differences between the desirable and undesirable outcomes, and the lesser the variability in patient values and preferences, the more likely a “strong” recommendation is warranted.²³ “Low” quality evidence may be sufficient to make a “strong” recommendation.²⁴ Dr. Li ignores altogether this aspect of medical decision making.

30. Recommendations made by professional associations in guidelines are infrequently based on well-designed and conducted randomized controlled trials. Instead, recommendations are frequently based on observational studies or, if such studies are unavailable, expert opinion. The medical use of the term “expert opinion” in this context refers to the consensus of experts in the relevant field(s) when studies are not available.

31. For example, Jonathan M. Hazelhurst and colleagues reviewed the guidelines produced by five endocrinology associations that graded the quality of the evidence. The 29 guidelines included 1,762 recommendations, only 191 (10.8%) of which were supported

²² Andrews J, Guyatt G, Oxman AD, et al. GRADE guidelines: 14. Going from evidence to recommendations: The significance and presentation of recommendations. J Clin Epidemiol. 2013;66(7):719-725.

²³ For example, among people with cancer of the lymphatic system, young people consistently value a longer life more than avoiding chemotherapy side effects, but some older individuals value avoiding side effects more. This justifies a “strong” recommendation in the younger age group and a “weak” recommendation in the older one. Andrews JC, Schunemann HJ, Oxman AD, et al. GRADE guidelines: 15. by well-conducted, randomized, controlled trials.²⁵ Similar studies of recommendations in other medical specialties also demonstrate that the minority of recommendations (10.8-29%) are based on “high” quality evidence. See Table 1 (Exhibit B). Similar studies are not available in surgery. Studies of surgery, rather than examining the level of evidence in clinical practice guidelines, examine the level of evidence for procedures performed by a surgeon(s) during a particular timeframe.²⁶

Clinical Practice Guidelines for Gender-Affirming Medical Care

32. The level of evidence supporting clinical practice guidelines recommendations regarding gender-affirming medical care is comparable to the level of evidence supporting many other medical treatments, and gender-affirming medical care should not be held to a higher standard.

33. The Endocrine Society, an international medical organization of over 18,000 endocrinology researchers and clinicians, has published a clinical practice guideline for the treatment of gender-dysphoric/gender-incongruent persons, including pubertal suppression, sex hormone treatment, and surgery for gender confirmation.²⁷ WPATH’s Standards of Care for the Health of Transgender and Gender Diverse People, which is affirming medical care. As a result of the studies referenced by the Endocrine Society and WPATH, and healthcare providers' experience, randomized controlled trials comparing gender-affirming medical care to no medical care are currently unethical. Potential investigators do not have clinical equipoise between treatment and no treatment; they believe that treatment is superior. Therefore, it would be unethical to not provide treatment to the control group. It is also highly unlikely that enough participants would enroll in randomized controlled trials, knowing they might not receive treatment, for them to be informative.³⁸

37. Even if such studies could be conducted ethically, they would provide a lower quality of evidence because of intrinsic limitations in their design. In addition to the aforementioned limitations of randomized controlled trials in surgery, it would be impossible to blind surgeons or participants to whether the participants underwent gender-affirming surgery. This might bias their perception of the outcomes and lower the rating of the study's quality.³⁹

CONCLUSION

38. Dr. Li holds gender-affirming medical care to too high of a standard; she asserts that it must be supported by randomized controlled trials or, more accurately, "high" quality evidence (because not all randomized controlled trials constitute “high” quality evidence). Medicine and its clinical practice guidelines do not hold recommendations to this standard and it is a standard that few recommendations meet. Only a minority of recommendations in clinical practice guidelines rely on “high” quality evidence. Treating individuals with gender dysphoria with gender-affirming medical care according to clinical practice guidelines, like the Endocrine Society’s and WPATH’s, is evidence-based. The level of evidence is reasonable to support the recommendations and is comparable to the level of evidence available in other fields of medicine.
